How 1–5’s work

For Baraka and the team. This is the daily desk the hub calls 1–5’s. Each person names the day’s work. The board then shows what is still open.

Open it

Sign in at hub.silverleaf.co.tz with the Ed Admin work email and Staff ID. Choose 1–5’s.

The site itself is silverleaf-tasks.vercel.app. It uses the same Ed Admin email and Staff ID. The first screen is My 1–5’s.

What each person sends

Five lines. Blank lines stay blank. At least one line has to be filled. After Add to my tasks, that list stays until tomorrow.

1–3 Priorities. The three things that matter today.

4 Challenge. Something that may get in the way of those priorities.

5 Progress recap. How yesterday’s priorities went.

Where each line goes

Priorities 1, 2, and 3 become cards on that person’s board, in the Tasks column, on the 1–5’s project. They are assigned to the person who wrote them.

The challenge and the progress recap are saved for the day. They do not become board cards. Challenges can be read on Updates.

During the day

Open my board. Drag a card from left to right.

1. Tasks — filed this morning, not started.
2. In progress — started. A blocked card stays in this column.
3. Backlog — held. A priority still sitting in Tasks the next morning moves here when the board opens.
4. Done — leaves the board and stays in 1–5 history.

Only the person who owns the card moves it. In progress stays on the board overnight. Done is what counts.

What Baraka watches

My 1–5’s is each person’s own list. Updates collects the day’s challenges and progress notes, and can be filtered by person and by date.

The board shows every open card, or only one’s own with Open my board. A weekly diligence figure counts priorities 1–3 only: of those cards filed since Monday, the share marked Done. The challenge and the recap are not in that percentage.

WhatsApp, if the number is connected

The same five lines can be sent from WhatsApp. The website is the path the hub opens.

This is not the other 1–5

Data & Tech has a separate form: three lines, due by 9:30, plus a Thursday department pulse. That form lives inside Data & Tech. Baraka's team uses the 1–5's desk described here.
